The Soror Concursus is one of the most decorated of Megacom divisions and every squad lives up to the fearsome reputation this all-female, hard-hitting combat force. Each Shock Sister, as they are often called, is equipped with the most advanced armor and armament available and is in constant training to maintain the razor's edge skill for which they are known. They live a highly-disciplined life in compounds completely separated from the rest of society.

Unlike most Megacom troops that begin as Light Infantry at an early age and work their way up to their eventual peak skill, so much training and mental preparation goes into a Sister's development that their first deployment on a field of battle routinely yields similar capabilities to the most battle-hardened veteran from other Heavy Infantry units.

The above profiles represent the most common deployment elements, and are designed to fulfill a role of search and destroy. The extremely high defense of the Soror Concursus, combined with potent mid-range weapons make the Sisters ideal for moving into an objective, clearing the opposition, and holding the position indefinitely. With a PAK battery or a Stalker to cover their advance, even the most heavily defended targets are in significant danger from this unit.
